{Our Mission }

WHO ARE WE

Amoize Magazine connects communities through culture, stories, food, art, and faith. It is created by the people, for the people. By incorporating creative contributions from average people in our community, the magazine is labeled as “Your Own Magazine”.

Our mission is to break down the misconceptions that are engraved in between different cultures by highlighting the diverse, rich, and exciting lives of people from different backgrounds. Originally, Amoize started as a lifestyle and African cultural magazine ten years ago.

Currently, the publication has developed into a wholesome international subscription service which helps to bridge the information chasm between the various cultures and ethnicities misunderstood largely within the African Countries of the world. It has now become a multicultural source because it has widened its scope and diversified its content.

The publication offers unique, powerful, and highly influential writings, sharing the news, views, observations, opinions, and experiences of people who come from various backgrounds, geographic locations, and cultural heritages.

At Amoize we attract High Spending Customers. Over the past 10 years Amoize Magazine has proved its ability to reach the lucrative high-spending local African markets. The magazine Design/Presentation, Content, Retail Pricing, Marketing and Distribution Strategies combine to reach the following demographic:

Amoize magazine readers are some of the most educated, affluent, and influential Africans.

They are also extremely devoted to Amoize magazine, a rare quality that translates into an intense interest in the magazine’s advertisers.

Amoize Magazine readers are savvy consumers now concerned with brands. They want information about products and they want it now. Most of them are not about messages of the mass media, they crave one on one interaction.

That’s where Amoize Magazine comes in, this is a marketing turned upside down, but it works. While the rest of the world is utilizing social media to advertise commodities, Amoize is utilizing what we call the “traditional” type of social media- word of mouth.

We go from business to business, home to home introducing members of our community to a range of businesses that advertise in our magazine. Its one-on-one conversations. And these conversations are taking place at every social event—be it after church on a Sunday, a birthday party, a wedding, an anniversary, at social club, at business banquets, or at a unique African social gatherings. This is called below-the-line marketing and the target market is the African consumer. In the African market you will find millions of customers, who might have been overlooked in the past by big multinational businesses. Amoize Magazine informs and educates members of the emerging middle/upper class in Africa communities on what to buy, and why they should buy it. This marketing strategy works in the Africa community because, African consumers will use something a friend has recommended or a sister or a brother or a parent or any relative as recommended. And to make sure the product will fulfill their needs, these consumers ask a trusted member of the community- Amoize Magazine.

HOW WE ACCOMPLISH THIS GOAL

What we do at Amoize Magazine is we hire people that actually go out into the different social events every weekend and sell the magazines, sometimes we hand them out for free. Our marketers walk the streets and communicate, so they go to places where people gather and really spend a lot of time promoting the magazine and your advert. But it’s about more than selling advertisement. It’s about developing trust that will ultimately lead to sales. There is a wonderful African proverb that says, “one hand washes the other.” That is the kind of communal perspective that Africans have. We do right by our advertisers and we jump through hoops to help grow your business. We see our advertisers as partners and many times as friends. We only want the best for you and we work hard to create publications that do just that.

Advertising with Amoize Magazine and any of our specialty publications in print and online is an excellent marketing decision for your company. Contact us today and let us work with your individual business needs to craft a customized plan to grow your business. For more information, email advertise@amoize.com or call 972-513-3555

AMOIZE magazine was created with passionate vision to balance and shatter the misconception and false reputation of Africans. It serves as a forum for understanding the African culture and a great tool for those within to keep true to their heritage.

AMOIZE is the African lifestyle and cultural magazine. Our ultimate goal is to enlighten and foster the reader's passion for the innumerable facets of the rich and beautiful African cultures. We seek to educate a worldwide audience about both the traditional heritage and the contemporary lifestyle in the African countries. The magazine is dedicated to journalistic integrity, thoughtful reporting and excellent design. Our magazine covers culture extensively, including the innovations of African fashion designers, spirituality, the rich African traditional weddings and also legend-contemporary artists/musicians. Our focus still remains on African culture, but the target audience extends to the worldwide audiences of all cultures and the diasporas of this region's people living around the world. We also provide our readers with a bridge to American culture, which is also frequently misunderstood in the African countries.

Our ongoing mission will always be to:

- * Inform and entertain our readers
- * Affect positive change in our community
- * Provide our advertisers with an effective vehicle to reach their customers

AMOIZE is a magazine that's mostly "written by its readers". That makes it your magazine. It's like a "conversation" between you and your neighbors, all sharing the joys of the African continent. Basically, we have photos and stories that help explain why Africa is such a great place to live.

COMPETITIONS

If you have something to give away to a lucky winner get in touch, we often love sharing competitions. If you want to send us a product/gift voucher to give away to one lucky reader, this also generates great interest for your brand/retailer.
